

CLINTON BROKE HER PROMISE ABOUT CREATING JOBS IN UPSTATE NEW YORK

Clinton Promised To Create 200,000 Jobs In Upstate New York When Running For Senate In 2000:

Clinton Promised To Create 200,000 Jobs In Upstate New York When She Campaigned For Senator In 2000. "She's reminded of it all the time around here, so Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton couldn't have been surprised when her failed 2000 campaign promise to bring 200,000 jobs to economically desperate upstate New York became part of the latest presidential debate." (Carolyn Thompson, "Fact Check: Clinton And Jobs Promised," USA Today, 2/28/08)

Clinton Ran TV Ads "Just Before The Election" Touting Her 200,000 New Upstate Jobs Goal. "A day after announcing her 2000 candidacy, then-first lady Clinton vowed to infuse more than a half billion dollars into the upstate economy. A television ad ran just before the election, citing the 200,000 new jobs goal." (Jerry Markon, "As senator, Clinton Promised 200,000 Jobs In Upstate New York. Her Efforts Fell Flat," The Washington Post, 8/7/16)

Clinton Massively Underperformed This Goal, With Job Growth In Upstate New York Remaining Stagnant And Manufacturing Cratering:

The Public Policy Institute In Albany, Which Uses U.S. BLS Data, Reported That Upstate New York "Lost More Than 31,000 Payroll Jobs Between October 2001 And December 2006." "The most authoritative jobs numbers are widely considered to be those from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS). Multiple analyses of its New York data show that upstate actually lost jobs during Clinton's first term. For example, the non-partisan Public Policy Institute in Albany — which uses BLS data for a monthly snapshot of Upstate New York — reported that the region lost more than 31,000 payroll jobs between October 2001 and December 2006." (Jerry Markon, "As senator, Clinton Promised 200,000 Jobs In Upstate New York. Her Efforts Fell Flat," The Washington Post, 8/7/16)

"During Her Overall Senate Tenure, According To The Institute, Upstate Jobs Rose 0.2 Percent Overall." "During her overall Senate tenure, according to the institute, upstate jobs rose 0.2 percent overall, but manufacturing jobs fell 24.1 percent." (Jerry Markon, "As senator, Clinton Promised 200,000 Jobs In Upstate New York. Her Efforts Fell Flat," The Washington Post, 8/7/16)

Manufacturing Jobs In Upstate New York Fell By "Nearly 25 Percent During Clinton's Time In The Senate." "But nearly eight years after Clinton's Senate exit, there is little evidence that her economic development programs had a substantial impact on upstate employment. Despite Clinton's efforts, upstate job growth stagnated overall during her tenure, with manufacturing jobs plunging nearly 25 percent, according to jobs data." While Failing To Uphold Her Promise To Her Constituents, Clinton Was In India Claiming The Outsourcing Of American Jobs Was "An Inevitability":

In Remarks From A 2005 Closed Door Presentation In India, Clinton Declared That Outsourcing Is "An Inevitability There Is No Way To Legislate Against Reality... Outsourcing Will Continue."

CLINTON: "Perhaps some economic incentives to at least think very hard before those decisions are made, but you know it is an inevitability there is no way to legislate against reality, so I think that uh, the outsourcing will continue." (Hillary Clinton, Remarks At India Today Conclave, New Delhi, India, 2/25/05)

Clinton Blamed 9-11 And President Bush For Not Reaching Her 200,000 Jobs Goal For Upstate New York:

In April Clinton Was Grilled For Promising 200,000 New Jobs For Upstate New York During Her Time As A New York Senator, Blaming 9-11 And President Bush For Not Reaching Jobs Goal. REPORTER: "Again, you see particularly 'upstaters' recalling your time in the U.S. Senate and also recalling your pledge for the 200,000 jobs, right? And I know I've seen your comments since then, that you were overzealous or exuberant perhaps and your hope was that there would be a Democratic White House, which was not achieved. You're not making such pledges now, but do you think that you could boost job growth in upstate New York if you were in fact in the White House?" CLINTON: "I sure do. You know, three things happened; we had 9/11, which was devastating for the entire state, we did have The Great Recession and Republican policies, and we had a very difficult situation with the Bush administration not enforcing trade agreements." (Hillary Clinton, Interview With Capitol Tonight, 4/4/16)
